Meet the musicians behind the swing

Pierre-Antoine

GUITARIST

Pierre-Antoine Troillet has been immersed in the music of Django Reinhardt since before he was born, lulled by Gypsy swing in his mother's womb. In 1979, at the age of nineteen, he had his first concert guitar made in Paris. Since then, through encounters and shared performances, he has continued to bring this music to life — a music that plays a central role in his artistic journey.

Stanislas

GUITARIST · CLARINETIST

Twenty years of guitar, from rock to blues, led Stanislas to jazz and gypsy jazz, where he found his passion: improvisation. He founded Swing Trilogy to share the spirit of jam sessions and the joy of swing. On acoustic and electric guitar alike, his playing freely blends the Django aesthetic with modern ideas. Now also a clarinetist, he is always on the lookout for the next idea that catches his ear.

Stefano

DOUBLE BASSIST

From the soft swing of bossa nova to the fiery drive of gypsy jazz, his guitar carried him through more than a hundred standards over the years — a repertoire as deep as it is varied. These days he trades the six strings for the double bass, weaving melodic lines beneath the group, locking in an irresistible groove and swinging hard.
